Taking the perfect pet photo

Pet parents just love to take photos of their furry friends. Here are some helpful tips to get that purrfect shot!

Use your pet's personality. Try and make that come through in the photos.

Get down to your pet's level for close up shots.

Focus on their eyes to create depth. Emotive pet portraits tend focus on eyes and face. Don't be shy to try out the portrait mode on your phone.

Use the background to create a story. A black or solid background can be used for classic portraits, where as a landscape or outdoor scene can be used for an action shot.

Take photos using a burst function on your camera or phone to capture motion.

Talk to your pet throughout the shoot. Using the words of encouragement can help your pet relax. It also allows you to bond with them while doing it.

Have your camera or phone ready. You never know when four-legged friend will do something photo-worthy.
