

Strange pet laws from around the world

In Switzerland, it is illegal to own only one guinea pig. This is because they are social animals and require companionship.

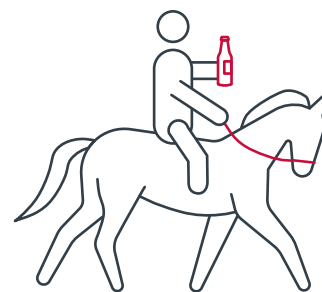

In Longburn, New Zealand, roaming cats are required by law to wear three bells around their neck.

In California, if your pet bird goes missing in the wee hours of the morning, you must wait until after 7am to whistle to attract them back.

In Turin, Italy, dogs must be walked at least three times a day, and owners can face hefty fines if they don't comply.

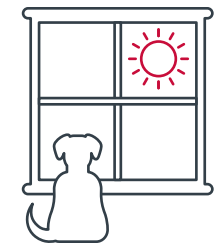

In the United Kingdom, it is against the law to ride a horse or cow while under the influence of alcohol.

In some areas in the US, dogs are not allowed to bark after 6 PM or for longer than 15 minutes straight.

In Newfoundland, it's illegal to keep a cow as a house pet. Cows must be kept in farms.

In Sweden, dogs attending a doggy-day-care center are required by law to be able to see outside a sunny window.

In China, it is against the law to have more than one dog per household, and the dog must be under 35.5 cm tall.

In Quitman, Georgia, it is illegal for the chickens to cross the road themselves. This is mainly because chicken-owners must always have control of their chicken.
